PIRATE PALS ARE IN PRISON

PIRATES STEPHEN SMITH AND DUSENBERRY OF FORT SHAFTER ARRESTED FOR STEALING THE SCHOONER LADY—THEY ARE LIABLE TO COURT MARTIAL FOR DESERTION AS WELL AS FEDERAL PROSECUTION FOR PIRACY.

This is the story of The Pirate Pals or The Log of the Lost Lady.

In a cell are Privates Stephen Smith and Dusenberry, pirates, and worried by the waves on Keau's cruel strand are the bones of Captain Miller's gallant little schooner Lady.

The pirates, the men who eloped with the Lady from this harbor before daylight last Sunday morning, face charges of desertion from the Army, Fort Shafter, charges of piracy preferred by Uncle Sam, and charges of larceny made by the Territory.

The Lady was missed Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. It developed that under cover of darkness, shortly after midnight, with her lights doused and not a light peeking from her cabin, the Lady, manned by these two deserting soldiers, who had grown weary of the routine of Army life, slid quietly through the channel and stood out to sea with all sail set, bound for anywhere to get away from here.

But the Lady, (and how is told a little further along), wound up on the rocks at Keau, between Waianae and Kaena, on the leeward side of this island, and was made matchwood, the soldiers taking ashore provisions and camping in the klawe and glue bushes until they were yesterday afternoon surprised by the police and rudely snatched from dreams of security and blissful independence.

And this is how it all happened, and it is all true, and not a Diamond Dick dream.

Blue-eyed Steve Smith, with twenty-five years experience in the art of breathing and very little attention given to thinking seriously, and "Cockney" Dusenberry were chums and fellow privates at Fort Shafter, not having seen very much of Army life. Dusenberry at one time was some kind of a sailor. Between duties at the fort they sided off into secluded spots and talked and talked of the wickedness of governments, the monotony of rations, the unromantic necessity of standing guard duty and the dull monotony of their daily existence. They held a council and decided to cut it out and seek new fields. They must get away from Oahu. Oahu is an island. A ship was the tool required to cut the tie that bound.

"They wandered to the harbor and cast their adventurous eyes over the shipping. The Mauna Kea looked good to them, but two men couldn't work her and, besides, there's less romance in a steam-kettle than there is in a sailing machine. Then they beheld Miller's schooner and they simultaneously fell in love with the afore-said Lady. She for them.

They found with glee that the Lady had a month's "tucker" aboard and they gloated over the future as pirate princes, sailing whither they would.

Thursday night was the psychological moment. Then Dusenberry, who was on guard duty, deposited his rifle on the lanai of the guard house, caught Steve's low whistle from the road and joined him in the red dirt highway. Running and jumping down the hill they hiked for the harbor and soon were aboard the Lady. But the wind was not favorable to getting out that night, so they slept aboard her and recounted wonders that had not yet happened.

At 1:30 o'clock on Sunday morning they upped sail and left the harbor.

"We steered for China," said one, telling the story.

"Oh, we steered for anywhere," remarked the other.

"Well, we steered," said the first.

The wind was fresh, but the crew did not give any particular attention to its direction. They were satisfied that it blew and was taking them away.

Captain Dusenberry called the watch and distributed the stations.

"Now, I'm captaining this 'ere bloomin' raker, Stevie," says he, "and you're chief officer."

Officers and crew were selected somewhat as follows, after that: Cook and steward, Smith; boatswain, Smith and Dusenberry; quartermasters, Dusenberry and Smith; starboard watch, Smith; port watch, Dusenberry; lookout, Dusenberry; helmsman, Smith.

Of course the various members of the crew could relieve each other as occasion demanded.

The night stars had grown old and the morning stars were opening their eyes when the port watch reported to the skipper that he couldn't see any more lights astern.

The skipper failed to hear him. He was forward, with his face over the stem giving up all within him that remained of the Fort Shafter supper the evening before. Whether it was sympathy or not is not recorded in the log, but the port watch, the next time he peered his weather eye astern for lights, felt a queer sensation in his stomach and he too sprawled on deck. Two souls with but a single thought, two stomachs that worked as one! They hollered "New York" till daylight a spanking breeze fanning along the Lady as she willed.

With dawn came recuperation and a consultation with the water cask.

"Land-ho!" shouted the lookout.

"Where-away?" cried the officer of the deck.

"A few points off one of the bows, I can't tell which, blime!"

"All hands on deck, prepare to tack ship!" yelled the mate.

But the sails were flapping and the wind was blowing the other way, what there was of it, and the story magazines in the cabin didn't contain any explanation of the phenomenon in what sea-stories they contained.

The pirates held a consultation aft and came to the conclusion that they had discovered a new island. They knew, positively, that they had dropped Oahu over the stern during the darkness. What was this 'ere bally islet, hanway? It might be Molokai, said one; but the other favored the new island idea.

They decided to anchor and investigate. The crew was mustered and over-

RIOT IN KAKAAKO

A ROW WHICH FOR A TIME
THREATENED TO BE A SERIOUS AFFAIR.

A riot of considerable proportions occurred in Kakaako, near the lower end of South street, about 6 o'clock last evening which fortunately resulted in nothing more serious than a few broken heads and black eyes. A bunch of drunken marines started the trouble, and soon had pitted against them a mob of a hundred or more Hawaiians, men, women and children, while a stone thrown into a Japanese barber shop brought out a bunch of angry sons of Nippon, who mixed up in the fracas.

The marines when things began to get too warm for them, retreated to their camp and securing their side arms, returned and engaged the crowd with their sword bayonets, until the arrival of a sergeant, who succeeded in getting the soldiers away. There were over a dozen marines mixed up in the row, and a number of them are said to have been pretty roughly handled.

Moanalua, the simple Hawaiian youth who affects the mannerisms and much of the habiliments of a woman in his dress, was the innocent cause of the fight. His coquetry attracted the attention of a drunken marine, who pulled some of his leis rudely from his neck. This naturally gave offense, and Moanalua's remonstrance brought him a buff in the eye that laid him out for a few moments and left him with a highly colored optic. Other Hawaiians about this time came to Moanalua's aid, and in no wise mollified by being called "niggers," coupled with other choice adjectives, proceeded to avenge the fallen masculine flirt.

The riot threatened to result seriously especially after the soldiers secured their bayonets. Two policemen who arrived on the scene were helpless to stay the excited crowd which was throwing rocks, and engaging in hand to hand conflict with the army men. Then the Japs mixed in and added to the turmoil.

The marines who created the disturbance are said to be late arrivals at the station, having but recently been brought from Midway. The old marines have never had any trouble with the natives, and through their efforts last night after the fight, the situation was explained, and the matter is already being passed over by the Hawaiians. It is possible that a military investigation may not do the same for the soldiers who engaged in the trouble.

ARREST OF YOUNG WOMAN COM-PLAINANT FOR VIOLATING ED-MUNDS ACT.

The divorce suit of Augusta Walsh against Patrick Walsh, which was to have been heard before Judge Lind say this morning, was continued because of the plaintiff's arrest on an Edmunds Act charge, and her hearing this morning before U. S. Commissioner Hatch.

The grounds for divorce were for cruelty, and the wife who is but 15 years of age and an unusually comely Portuguese girl, also wants $50 per month alimony. She has been married for about a year to Walsh, who is about four times her age. The raid which resulted in the young wife's being caught by the police in the presence of witnesses, in a compromising position with a Greek, named Manuel Perras, at her mother's home in Camp No. 2, Vineyard street, was engineered by the aged husband.

L. Tenney Peck On Car Service

RAPID TRANSIT PRESIDENT REPLIES TO COMPLAINT FROM FORT SHAFTER GARRISON—NOTHING CAN BE DONE UNTIL UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT STRAIGHTENS OUT THE MATTER OF THE COMPANY'S PRIVILEGES.

The army people at Fort Shafter have been complaining a good deal of late over the fact that the cars on the King street line only run to the foot of the hill on which the post is located. They believe that the line should be extended to the post and state that not only would there be an increased passenger traffic, but also a chance for the Rapid Transit to handle a large amount of freight.

In speaking of this matter a couple of days ago an army officer said:

"It does not seem to me that the people of Honolulu appreciate what the Federal government is doing here. It is spending money by the millions and still little attention is paid to the wants of the Federal men which should be supplied here. Take for instance this question of extending the street car tracks to Fort Shafter. It may not seem a very long walk from the end of the car line to the post, but on a hot day, with a heavy uniform on, it is a pretty tough proposition.

"I cannot see why there is this delay, as he road has been graded for that specific purpose and it looks to me like a matter of actual negligence.

When asked for an interview on the subject, L. Tenney Peck, president of the Rapid Transit, said:

"The Rapid Transit Company does not see its way clear to any extension of its lines or any increase of its service until its appeal to the United States Supreme Court on the Liliha street schedule case has been settled. The company's service must be based on the matter of revenue as well as on the wants of its patrons and no new line need be expected to be built unless it can be operated at a profit.

PRIMARY LAW OF CIVIC FEDERATION

SENATOR DICKEY OF THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE PREPARES
AN ACT FOR THE NEXT SESSION—A LAW LEGALIZING PRI-MARIES AND PROVIDING THAT ALL PARTIES SHALL HOLD THEIR PRIMARIES ON SAME DAY.

Senator C. H. Dickey, at the request of the Civic Federation Committee on Legislation, has prepared a primary law for submission to the next legislature. The draft of the law, omitting the text of sample ballots, etc., is as follows:

"Section 1. All candidates of political parties shall be hereafter nominated by direct primaries in accordance with the provisions of this act."

"The name of no candidate of any political party who shall be nominated in any other manner than direct primary shall be printed on any official ballot to be used in any territorial or municipal election."

"This is not to be construed to prevent the nomination of independent candidates by petition in accordance with law."

"Section 2. The Secretary of the Territory shall designate a day not more than thirty days after the final session of the Registration Board before a general election on which a primary election shall be held to nominate candidates for all political parties, for Territorial, County or City elections."

"The inspectors of election of the various precincts, appointed by the Governor, shall act as inspectors of the primary election, and shall receive like pay as for regular elections."

"Section 3. The expenses of direct primary elections, including the pay of inspectors, shall be borne by the County in which the election is held. The County shall furnish the necessary ballots, ballot boxes and other necessary supplies."

"Section 4. All persons qualified to vote for members of the Legislature in each precinct, shall be entitled to vote in such precinct at any direct primary. The laws of the Territory relative to elections shall apply to, and govern direct primary elections, in all matters where applicable, including the preparation of ballots, sample ballots, ballot boxes, instruction cards, watchers, challenges, declaration of result, records, care of ballots, and in all other particulars if pertinent or necessary, and not contrary to the provisions of this act; but, whenever such law shall not be sufficient, or not applicable and there is no provision of this act applicable, the Secretary of the Territory is hereby authorized and directed to provide the necessary regulation to make this act effective."

"Section 5. All candidates for nomination by any political party to any office, national, territorial or county, shall not less than fifteen days before the date set for the primary election, file with the Clerk of the County where they reside, and, in case of candidates for the office of Delegate to Congress, in all the counties, a consent that their names shall be presented before the primaries for nomination. A fee of five dollars ($5.00) shall be paid by each candidate so filing consent, to be paid into the County treasury.

"Such consent shall be acknowledged before an officer duly qualified to take acknowledgments to instruments and his official seal shall be thereto attached."

"On the tenth day before the date of the primary election, the Clerk of each County shall cause to be posted in each precinct, in two prominent places, notices containing, under the title of each office for which nominations are to be made, the names of the persons who have signed consent as aforesaid, to stand for nomination to such office. The names of the candidates of each political party shall be placed by themselves, but alphabetically in each party."

"At least twenty-four hours before the opening of the polls of the primary, the Board of Supervisors of each County shall furnish the Chairman of the Board of Inspectors of election, in each precinct, sufficient ballots of each political party to properly carry on the primary. In furnishing such ballots 50 per cent more than the total votes cast for the candidate at the preceding general election, having the highest vote in each of the parties in that precinct, will be considered sufficient."

"Section 9. When an elector presents himself to vote at any direct primary
